INT. COUNTRY HOUSE - LIVINGROOM

LUCKY, a ruggedly handsome Caucasian male in his late twenties, and STACY, a pretty woman with edge also in her late twenties, enter the Livingroom.

Lucky is moving quickly, grabbing things, and shoving them in a bag, continuously crossing in front of a vintage style TV on a TV stand.

The TV is off.

Stacy stands off to the side, watching him with concern on her face.

Lucky notices and stops in front of the TV.

LUCKY
What are you doing? Why aren't you packing?

STACY
Why did you go to Fredricksburg?

LUCKY
What? I don't know. To find you.

STACY
No Lucky, the real reason.

Lucky smirks and begins packing again.

LUCKY
Stacy, we have to go. This isn't the time.

STACY
Lucky it's the only time we have.

Lucky stops in place, facing Stacy.

LUCKY
What does that mean?

STACY
Why did you go to Fredricksburg, Lucky?

LUCKY
I don't know.

STACY
Think Lucky.

LUCKY
Why are you asking me this right now?

STACY
Because you weren't on a rescue mission, Lucky. I need you to remember.

LUCKY
Remember what?

STACY
You know what, Lucky. Think.

Lucky stands silently for a moment Then

IN SLOW MOTION:

HIS FACIAL EXPRESSION CHANGES AND HIS KNEES SLIGHTLY BUCKLE.

LUCKY
(whispers to himself)
The accident...

Lucky's eyes begin to swell with tears

Then

The TV behind him turns on by itself.

DONNA CHANG (O.S.)

A tear rolls down Lucky's cheek. We notice

ON SCREEN: Asian woman speaking at a press conference.

DONNA CHANG
It's been 3 months since an explosion destroyed the entire lab. My partner and co-founder of our research program, was Stacy Warren Daniels.

LOOKS TO STACY.

LUCKY
I remember.

STACY
(Teary eyed)
3 months ago there was an explosion. A mistake. Unfortunately I was there and suffered a fatal brain injury, Lucky. You have to let me go.

He slowly moves toward her, reaching to her face.

With his hand on her cheek he stares into her, as if examining her once again.

LUCKY
What is this?

STACY
For us, a chance to say goodbye.

LUCKY
But why? You're here, I'm here.

STACY
We don't belong here, Lucky.

Lucky takes her hand in his.

LUCKY
But we are here, together. I can save you, here. I can save us.

Stacy lets go of his hand and begins moving nervously.

STACY
You still refuse to accept what's happening. What's already happened.

LUCKY
(frustrated)
Because you aren't supposed to die, Stacy! You can't.
(Pleading)
And all the signs that didn't add up, it all led me here, to fix this. I can still fix this, Stacy. Just let me fix this.

They're both silent for a moment, as Stacy lowers her head with disappointment, then looks back to Lucky with compassion.

STACY
Because you couldn't accept what happened, you created this mission in your mind to justify what you feel. But you can't fix this, Lucky. Not this. You were never on a rescue mission. You wanted revenge. You wanted to hold someone responsible for what happened to me, and you kidnapped someone!

(beat)
But the reality is, I made a dangerous decision to save lives. And it cost me mine. But I'm okay with that. That was MY mission in life. But this, Lucky, this isn't yours. It just isn't.
(beat)
You can't stay here. Neither can I.

Lucky's eyes glassed over showing a combination of heart break and anger.

HENRY, a scruffy older bearded older man, enters abruptly.

HENRY
I'm sorry to interrupt but we gotta make a move. Our soldier friend is on the way.

Lucky and Stacy attempt to quickly get themselves together, side barring their conversation for the time being.

Henry leads both Lucky and Stacy out the front door.
